Nobody's fault but mine, Lord (Metropolitan Athanasios of Lemessos)

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

It's all very well for people to communicate over the Internet now, to send e-mails, to write messages to other people in mere seconds. But sometimes they're unable to communicate with their spouse or their children. We've wrecked our homes. When we find it difficult to communicate with others, we have to realize that the cause of the problem doesn't lie with other people, but with us. It's our fault, because we can't find the point where we can meet and speak with other people.
