We should sigh and lament (Saint John Chrysostom)

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

If the soul is superior to the body, as, of course, it is, it's more fitting to sigh and lament over it if it's lost. Again, if it's unaware [of its state], that's another reason to sigh and lament. Because we should be more saddened by those who seek promiscuous sexual relations than by those who are suffering from a fever.
