In the end, we're all the same (Saint John of Kronstadt)

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

Love everyone, indiscriminately. Don't think about whether they're weak or sinful.

Don't think about sin, but about where people come from, which is the image of God Himself. Don't get upset over the weaknesses of others, their badness, pride, envy, avarice or gluttony. You yourself aren't without sins. In the end, if we're talking about sin, everybody's in the same boat.
