It's nobody's fault but ours (Metropolitan Athanasios of Lemessos)

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

People can communicate on the internet, they can send e-mails, send messages to other people in seconds, yet can't communicate with their spouse or their children. We've demolished our homes. When we have a problem communicating with others, we have to realize that the cause lies not with them but with us. We're to blame, not the other person, because we can't find a meeting-point where we can come together and talk to each other.
