11 Ιουνίου 2011

A Christian mental health worker has been fired after passing colleagues a booklet warning of the physical and psychological damage some women suffer after an abortion

In English / Christianity / In English

By Tim Ross, Religious Affairs Editor The Telegraph

Ms Forrester was found guilty of 'gross professional misconduct' and fired
Photo: David Rose

Margaret Forrester discussed the booklet with family planning staff at the health centre where she worked because she felt that the NHS was failing to give patients information about the risks and other options to terminating a pregnancy.

But after a six-month disciplinary process, during which Ms Forrester had to fight her own case and became ill, she was found guilty of “gross professional misconduct” and fired. (περισσότερα...)