15 Φεβρουαρίου 2011

Athens backs villagers' fight for German compensation over 1944 SS massacre

Ξένες γλώσσες / In English

Greek civilians look on as the Germany army makes its way to Thessaloniki in April 1941. Photograph: Getty

George Papandreou's decision to support claims at International Court of Justice risks row with Berlin when its financial help is needed

- Helena Smith in Athens
- The Observer, Sunday 13 February 2011
- Article history

A Nazi massacre remembered by Greeks as one of the worst atrocities of the second world war is threatening to plunge relations between Athens and Berlin to a new low amid rising criticism of Germany's failure to pay compensation.

Read more…

(περισσότερα…)